Survivor Statement and Pattern of Abuse Report

Date: May 30, 2025
Location: California, United States
Name: [Redacted for Safety]

I. Summary Statement

For over five years, I have been subjected to systematic coercion involving real-time surveillance, income manipulation, and psychological warfare, carried out through embedded state and non-state actors in California. Despite making numerous public disclosures, the response has not been denial—but indifference, intimidation, and further targeting. This record documents the methods used against me, the patterns of abuse, and the irreparable damage done to my autonomy, health, and safety.

II. Pattern of Abuse

- Controlled or blocked access to rental housing
- Rent conditions dictated to restrict autonomy
- Property damage and tampering to induce fear

2. Medical and Bodily Autonomy Violations

- Subjected to coercive and retaliatory medical treatment
- Physical damage through stealth biomedical or technological assault
- Sexual harassment and manipulation as forms of control

3. Policing and Legal Harassment

- Direct and indirect police harassment
- Interference with income via licensing systems
- Thefts and property loss occurring with no recourse

4. Economic Sabotage and Psychological Targeting

- Income blocked or channeled through exploitative terms
- Psychological coercion through threats and life trajectory manipulation
- Recurrent exposure to credible harm and terror tactics

5. Technology-Based Assault and Instrumentation

- Use of electronic or acoustic devices to cause harm

- Surveillance or experimental tech tracking behaviors or inducing symptoms
- Deprivation of digital autonomy and communications interference

IV. Use of Sexual Trauma as a Control Mechanism

Throughout the timeline of abuse, a recurring and particularly destructive tactic has involved the use of sexual trauma, coercion, and harassment as tools of long-term control. These actions have not been incidental, but appear to follow a patterned strategy seen in other state-sponsored or institutionally-tolerated abuse systems.

Key elements of this strategy include:
- Early-life targeting or conditioning related to sexuality, often occurring when the individual is too young to resist or comprehend
- Repeated sexual harassment in adulthood, often delivered indirectly or through social engineering tactics
- Use of sexual shame, manipulation, or entrapment attempts to discredit, isolate, or provoke self-harm
- Medical, psychiatric, or legal systems being leveraged to misrepresent, gaslight, or punish disclosures related to sexual trauma

These tactics appear intended not only to harm the individual, but to weaken psychological defenses, maintain long-term behavioral compliance, and create a permanent sense of vulnerability and surveillance. This use of intimate trauma as a weapon is among the most insidious and difficult forms of abuse to name publicly—yet its persistence and pattern strongly indicate a calculated tool of social and political control.

V. Statement of Purpose

This document is not a complaint. It is a record. It exists to preserve the truth for any individual, organization, or future generation seeking to understand how technological abuse, coercive systems, and institutional silence can converge to suppress and violate a human being without formal acknowledgment. If anything happens to me, this stands as testimony. If nothing changes, it still bears witness.
